The author has a plan for the story to unfold – the action or sequence of events that happen in the story is a plot. Plot is usually a series of related incidents that builds and grows as the story develops. There are five (5) basic elements in a plot map.

- Exposition – the part of a story that helps the reader understand the background or situation in which the work is set
- Rising Action – the events in a story that move the plot forward; involves conflicts and complications; builds toward the climax of the story
- Climax – the high point, or turning point, in a story; usually the most intense point near the end of a story when the major conflict is resolved
- Falling Action – the action that occurs after the climax; minor conflicts are resolved and mysteries are solved
- Resolution – after the climax and falling action when the story is brought to a satisfactory end

Look at the plot map below. Complete it with appropriate content from the novel.
